

SAUVE UPS OUR GRANT BY $3 MILLION AS DIEF AGREES TO NEW AID PLAN

Grants 'Good Xmas Gift' As James Plans Salary Hikes

Dr. F. Cyril James, principal and Vice-Chancellor told the "Daily" last night that McGill is happy that at long last it will receive grants at least as generous as universities in other provinces.

Dr. James said, however, that he has not studied the new plan and cannot make any final judgement on it.

He added: "At the moment, when I am beginning work on the budget for 1960-61, there could be no better Christmas present than the announcement that McGill will have enough money after April 1960 to increase the salaries of its staff to a level that professors in other provinces of Canada have already attained."

Ottawa Accepts Sauve's Plan For College Grants

The Federal Government has offered an alternative university grants scheme designed to end the deadlock with Quebec and provide educational assistance "on a basis of fairness and equality". Prime Minister John Diefenbaker announced details of the offer to all provinces last night.

Under the plan, for the next two years only, the Federal Government will give the provinces part of the corporation taxes collected in the provinces to pay for university grants.

The assistance will be no more and no less than the present system under which Ottawa provides an annual payment of $1.50 per head of provincial population. Some $25,000,000 has been held in trust for Quebec since 1951-52 when the province changed its mind about accepting the money earmarked for it. The plan, which government officials hope will go into operation by the beginning of the 1960-61 fiscal year next April, did not mention the untouched millions which are Quebec's if they want the money.

"In making this proposal", the Prime minister stated, "scrupulous consideration is being given to the spirit and principles of the British North America Act."

Reports from the provincial capital indicated the Diefenbaker proposal was along the lines of a proposal made by Premier Paul Sauvé in Ottawa recently. There was no immediate indication how many other provinces would go along with the plan, described by Diefenbaker, as "entirely optional."

Quebec's present corporation tax is nine per cent. Under the new scheme, the Federal Government would increase this to 10 per cent, Quebec getting the extra one per cent. If the money gained from the corporation tax was more than that currently received through the National Council of Canadian Universities, the additional revenue would be paid back to the Federal Government. If it was less, Ottawa would make the difference. "The amounts paid to universities and colleges, whichever plan is followed or accepted", Diefenbaker added, "will be the same — no more, no less."

This new plan recognizes and indeed underlines our belief that the challenges of the future can be met only by the total effort of all our Canadian universities and colleges.

In the Legislative Assembly, Premier Sauvé indicated that Diefenbaker's new plan leaves a few questions unanswered. He didn't say what they were but he did read a letter he had received from the Prime Minister today in which Diefenbaker had outlined the plan.

"The Prime Minister", he said, "was courteous enough to wait until all Premiers had received his letter before making his announcement tonight. However, before I make any statement or comment on this letter, I wish to consult with the members of my cabinet." He also mentioned that Diefenbaker's plan "is in conformity" with the plan that he himself had suggested earlier.

British Columbia's education minister, Les Petersen, says the Federal Government's new offer on university aid is "just a play on words". He called the arrangement "a subterfuge for Quebec." If it doesn't make any difference to the amount the province receives, it's not going to do anything for education.

McGill University will receive almost three million more dollars in provincial grants next year than it did this, it was announced last night. Provincial budget estimates tabled in the legislature show that the province's regular total statutory grants are increasing to $8,059,000 from $1,119,700. McGill's share will be $3,235,000 compared to $262,000 last year.

Indications are that the Government has changed the standards under which the grants are to be made, as of the fiscal term starting April 1.

News of the revised grants structure preceded by a few hours Prime Minister Diefenbaker's announcement that the Quebec-Ottawa deadlock over federal aid has been settled by an arrangement in the corporate income tax field.

The $8,059,000 sum apparently exceeds the amount Quebec universities would receive next year under the federal aid scheme which Quebec will now operate. During the current year the amount of federal aid for Quebec is $7,527,000 and this is $200,000 higher than the previous year.

There was no immediate indication why this is so, but the government is expected to explain, probably in the legislative assembly, how the new provincial grants structure works.

The amount of grants to the other Quebec universities were announced at the same time (grants received this year are indicated in brackets):

Laval University — $2,305,000 ($317,300); University of Montreal — $2,190,000 ($500,000); University of Sherbrooke — $194,000 (nil); University of Bishop's College — $94,000 ($40,000); Sir George Williams University — $41,000 (nil).

Nothing is known about Sauvé's formula for setting down these figures and it is expected he will make an announcement soon.

He has said university grants would be regular and sufficient to meet needs, but how this is worked out has not been explained.

It is known that Premier Sauvé does not agree with Ottawa on the formula used to set the amount for aid to universities. Ottawa bases its payments on the population figure for each province, at the rate of $1.50 per capita.

Sauvé is known to feel this works out unfairly for Quebec because, although it has more university students than Ontario, the neighboring province has a larger population and therefore gets a large share of aid under the current plan.

"Education has always remained the foremost objective of the National Union government and I am convinced that the new Premier will not only continue to implement the same policy, but will, if possible, further augment the state's participation in such expenses," said provincial finance Minister, John Bourque.

Mr. Sauvé said last night that his next problem would be to solve the question of the $25 million now lying in trust in Ottawa for Quebec's universities. He added that the provincial cabinet would be considering the question very shortly.

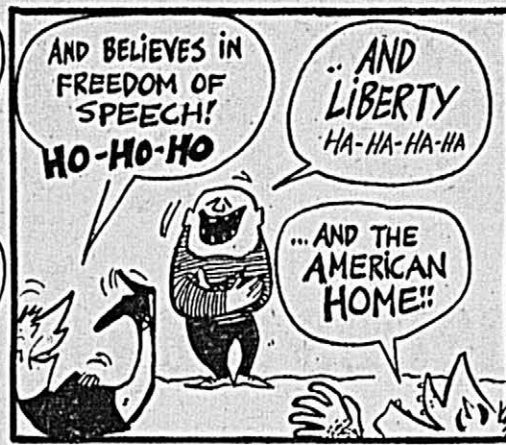

Rumours were rife in the provincial capital last night as to just what steps would be taken to solve the problem, but it was considered by skilled observers that they were just that — rumours — and not official "leaks". In the past the Premier has said that the money would go toward education but it has never been clear whether this would be to Quebec universities or other institutions in the province. Some have interpreted the Premier's remarks as meaning Quebec had already adequately compensated the universities for their loss of federal aid.

Chorusters Unfold Saga Of Christmas Saturday

The 1959 edition of the Choral Society's traditional Christmas concert, "Sing at Christmas", will unfold Saturday, December 12 at 8:30 p.m. in the Currie Gymnasium under the direction of Gifford Mitchell. Accompanist will again be international pianist, William Stevens.

The first half of the programme, which narrates the Christmas Story, will feature carols from France, Germany, Poland, Italy, the Tyrol, the Appalachian Mountains, and the American south. Included in the first half will also be "There Shall a Star", from the unfinished oratorio, "Christus", by Mendelssohn.

The second half of the programme relates the Christmas customs of many lands. "Wassail, Wassail" tells of the custom in rural England of going from house to house during the twelve days of Christmas, inviting all to drink "Wassail" from a garlanded bowl of spiced ale.

Another traditional English carol is "The Boar's Head Carol", which is still sung during Christmas at King's College, Oxford. "Deck the Halls", a traditional Welsh carol, will be familiar to the audience, while many will recognize the traditional German carol, "Tannenbaum O Tannenbaum".

The program will conclude with the cantata, "Twas the Night Before Christmas".

Severinghaus Featured At Sawbones' Lecture

On Friday, December 14 at 8:30 p.m., the McGill Medical Undergraduate Society will present the Third Annual Lyman Duff Memorial Lecture in Moyse Hall.

The lecture series was initiated by McGill medical students as a tribute to the late Dr. Duff, who at the time of his death in 1956 was Dean of the Medical Faculty and Professor of Pathology at McGill University.

Invited as this year's guest speaker is Dr. Aura E. Severinghaus, Associate Dean of The College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University.

Long active in medical teaching and research in the fields of anatomy and histology, Dr. Severinghaus holds among other awards the Republic of China's Peoples Medal of Honored Merit, which he received in 1943 for his efforts in the rehabilitation of China's medical libraries.

Much of Dr. Severinghaus' research in recent years has dealt with the role of a liberal arts education as preparation for a medical career. It is on the basis of this work that he will present the Duff Memorial Lecture on "The Educated Physician."

Introducing the speaker will be Dr. Lloyd G. Stevenson, Dean of the McGill Medical Faculty. Among those invited as platform guests are the Chancellor of the University, Mr. R.E. Powell, and the Principal, Dr. F. Cyril James.

Preceding the address by Dr. Severinghaus, awards will be presented to last year's winners of academic prizes in the Medical School.

Basketbelles Play In Open League

by CECILE KALIFON
Women's Sport Editor

The Women's Open Basketball League is well underway with approximately half a dozen games played to date.

The League is composed of two sections Junior and Senior, with McGill represented in both.

The Junior League inaugurated the new year with a game on November 30. McGill Juniors soundly trounced the Northmount "Y" 27-11. Liz Bertram and Darlene Sumner exhibited some neat shooting, each netting 9 points. The same night Marianopolis tangled with Sir Georges Juniors, the Purple and Gold coming out victors 42-11. Ex-McGillian Betty Alexander scored 17 markers for the winners, while Marlene Sullivan countered six times.

On December 1, Macdonald College played Notre Dame Centre, with the Aggies defeating the Centre 52-11.

Montreal East "Y" and Marguerite Bourgeoys met in another Junior encounter. The "Y" led by Jean Harris with 21 points triumphed 42-35 in a hard-fought game. L. Halky and N. Melancon turned in fine all round performances while W. Baillargeon with 11 tallies held her own for the losers. Marguerite Bourgeoys was in the lead till the three-quarter mark until the "Y" opened up and pulled ahead.

The Senior League is scheduled to swing into full action this week with all teams in action. A month layoff in the middle of the schedule due to the Christmas holiday will occur after December 16, the league resuming play the second week in January.

In the Senior section four teams are entered in a round robin tournament. McGill, the YWCA and Macdonald College are scheduled in nine games against each other, with one team fewer than last year. The Junior League this year appears to have grown. The following teams are listed in the schedule: McGill, Northmount Marianopolis, Sir George, Notre Dame Centre, Montreal East "Y", and Marguerite Bourgeoys.

A GOOD PART of the Redmen's scoring punch will come from the line of Tim Peters, Bruce Hutchison and Gord Merritt (left to right). Peters and Hutchison were rookies last year, and developed remarkably during the season. Merritt sat out '58-59, but should be useful in the Redmen camp this semester.

Poloists Carry 5 Goal Lead Into 2nd Series Game

Friday, the 27th the Redmen Water Polo team romped to a 9 to 4 victory over the University of Toronto Blues in the first of the two-game total points series for the Hershorn Trophy.

Henri "Rocket" Polkki opened the scoring early in the first quarter, followed by Eddy Menashe and Cameron Grout, and Rocket Polkki again in quick succession. Only in the second quarter did the Blues finally manage to get two goals past the McGill goalie, Juris Swistunenko, who undoubtedly played his best game of the season. In the second half, the Redmen retaliated with 5 more goals to be answered by 2 on the part of the Blues. Eerie Magasanik and Dave Sherwood added their effort by tallying 3 goals among themselves. Biggest factor in the Redmen's easy victory was the outstanding McGill defensive line composed of veterans Andy Halmay, and Morty "Big Bill" Bellinsky, who effectively suppressed the Blues' big forward guns.

With their present 5 goal lead over the Blues, the Redmen are confident that they will remain in possession of the trophy for the unprecedented fifth straight time.

The final game will take place in the Queen's City tomorrow night, with the locals highly favored to come out on top.

Spinarama Radio Show At McGill

Although the Daily has taken a holiday leave, McGill students can keep posted on University activities by tuning in to Radio Station CJAD's production of Spinarama.

Each Friday from 5 to 6 in the afternoon, master of ceremonies Gene Kirby, assisted by student Bob Carswell, informs Greater Montreal of activities on the campus. Featured on the programme which originates in the Union lounge are interviews with campus personalities.

Students are invited to visit the Union lounge this afternoon or any Friday afternoon to watch the production. For those who may be at home from 5 to 6, C.J.A.D. is located at 8, 80, or 800 on the dial, depending on your receiver.
